Coming together and feeling
Over joyed at all the Memories that will be
Everlasting in our minds

Today and for the rest
Of our lives we will Greatly appreciate what we have become and in the End we will look back and Thank this school and

Coming together to bring about change

Student Council

Bringing new ideas to the table

The Student Council did many new things this year. The officers and a group of other members attended convention and came up with many new ideas. The Student Council planned and decorated for the Holiday Ball. They also helped with Homecoming activities.

Angie Lubbers and Paige Luebbehusen help sell bracelets.

The group goes to work planning for the coming school year.

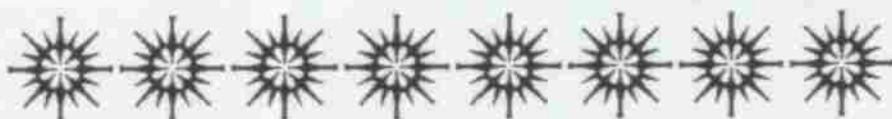

The sixth grade class has fun with the All Stars.

Kaci Giesler shows the eighth graders the "drunk goggles."

The sixth graders do the All Stars experiment to teach them to abstain.

PEP and All Stars Stand by your morals

This year Peers Educating Peers was very successful. With new freshman programs added last year, many more students are now informed about the PEP message. The mentors focus on spreading the message to resist peer pressure to grades seven, eight, and nine. They give multiple programs throughout the year to keep the underclassmen informed.

A new group of All Stars was selected this year. The All Stars speak about the importance of abstaining from drugs and alcohol.

Whose got spirit?

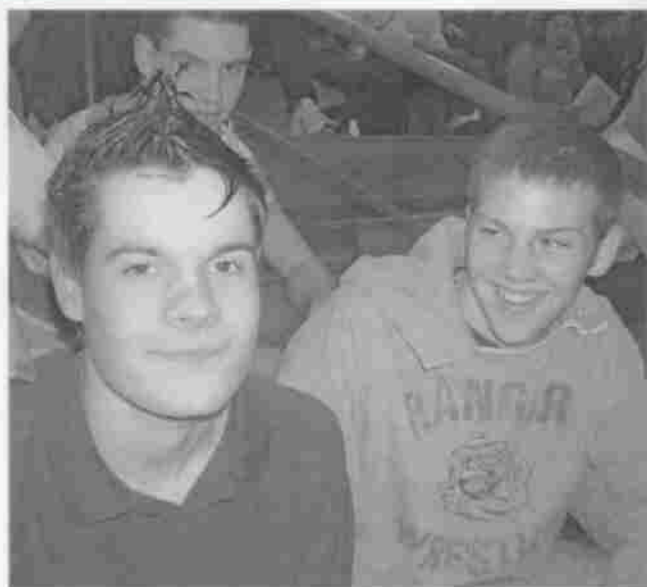

At the beginning of the year, there was a lack of participation in spirit activities, but as the year progressed more students got into it.

Spirit Club members help decorate during sectional.

Matt Gilmore and Aaron Ketzner took over the Ranger cheer, and the Ranger Nation discovered the roller coaster.

Laura Mehling participates in a pep session.

Brandon Weyer and Ben Taber enjoy the game.

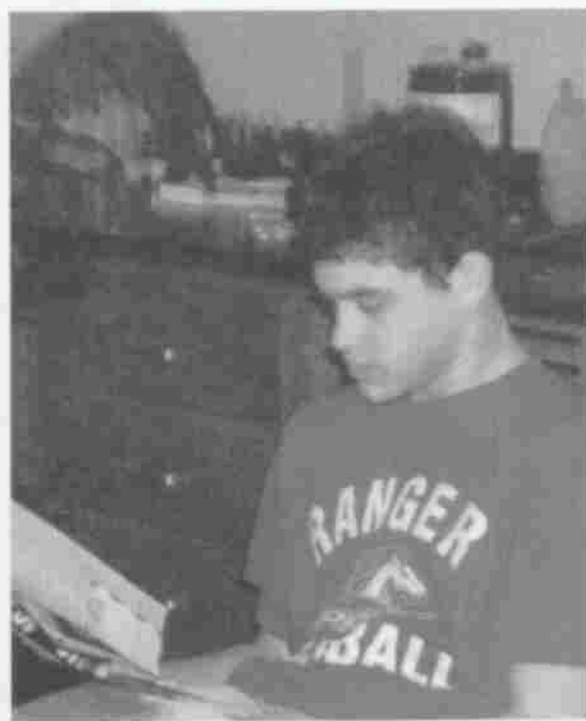

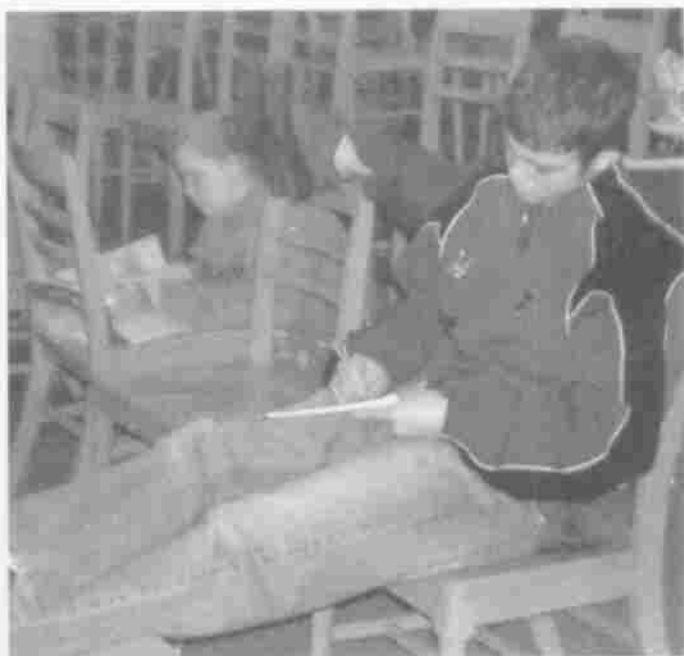

SADD

Students send a positive message

Students Against Destructive Decisions took an active roll this year, especially during Red Ribbon Week. This project made an impact. They also helped support the Great American Smokeout and decorated to get their point across.

Making the world a better place

Key Club keeps tabs on things

Although the Key Club wasn't as active as they've been in past years, they still maintained a good reputation. With Kyla Gehlhausen as president, the club worked with numerous groups to provide services to the community. The 75 members took part in collecting pop tabs for Riley's Hospital. They also worked with the Jasper Key Club to wrap presents for people in need. Several members also attended the Key Club Convention during the year.

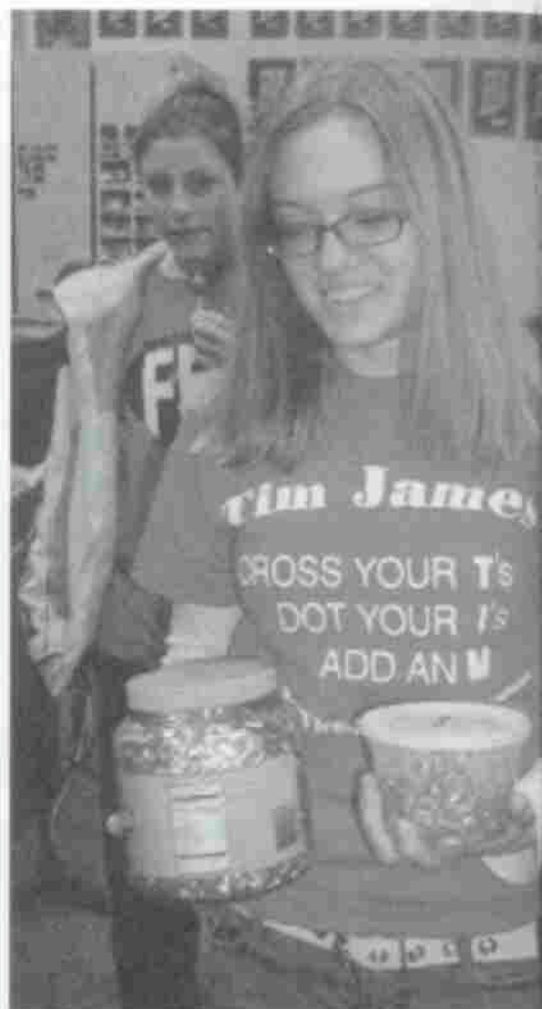

Junior Ali Meyer enjoys knowing that she is helping a good cause by collecting tabs for Riley's hospital.

These Key Club members put their best feet forward.

The officers are proud of the tabs they have collected for Riley's hospital.

Key club officers follow the lead of Mr. Chuck Bradley.

Freshman Jessica Jochem learns how to empty the boxes.

Recycling Club hugs trees

The FP Recycling Club stayed busy this year as they continued to save the world, one piece of paper at a time. Under the new leadership of Mrs. Amy Hawkins, the club continued recycling papers by having a collection box in each classroom in the school. They also recycled bottles from basketball games. The members made themselves known to the student body with their t-shirts. With several new, and returning, members, the club was diligent about doing their job throughout the year.

Which class officer is the guilty one?

Freshman Melanie Mundy is saving the world, one bag at a time.

FFA's year is very "fruitful"

FFA members continued their "fruitful" endeavors this year. Under the leadership of president Chad Lueken, the club participated in numerous activities, including Career Development Events, the District and National Conventions, the District Kickoff, and the auction in which people bid on the members. There were also many members who competed this year. The Soils, Forestry, and Envirathon teams competed at the state level. One forestry team came in second at state. To fund all of their activities, the FFA held its annual fruit sale. The top sellers were Derek Rasche, Keith Fromme, and Elliot Sitzman.

Sophomore Abbey Bohnenkemper is interested in the club's activities.

Senior Wes Gutgsell is proud to serve the National FFA Organization.

Aaron Borden, Marshall Lueken, and Derek Klem power wash a decking area during the summer.

Marshall Lueken is a man with a mission as he heads to the next work area.

Aaron Cooper, junior, spends a summer day working at Andry's Fish Farm.

FP clubs work together for a good cause

FCCLA has another active year under "double" leadership

With Amy and Abbey Sermersheim leading them, FCCLA members had an eventful year. According to Abbey, there were about 16 members. The club hosted many activities, including a mother/daughter banquet, their annual "Little Friends" Halloween party, a breakfast for the teachers, and a candy cane sale. The club also had a bake sale. They used the money they earned to buy toiletries for the Food Bank.

Juniors Amy and Abbey Sermersheim lead the meeting.

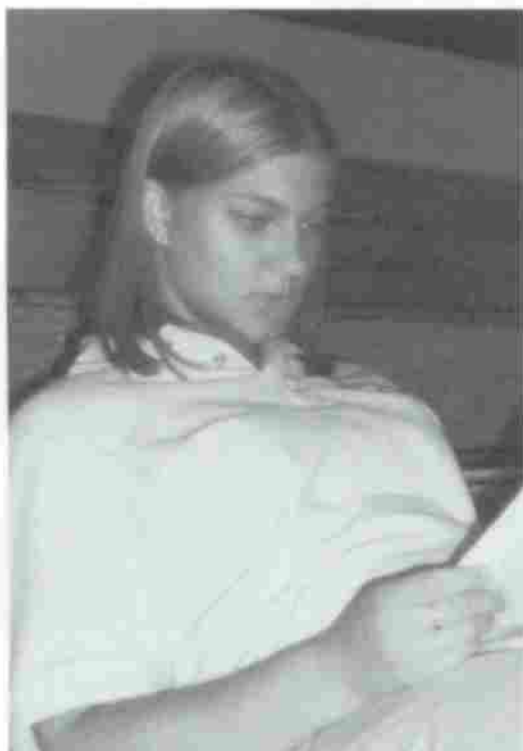

These girls are eager to know what the club is doing.

The FCCLA board promotes the club's goals: family, career, community, leaders, and America.

Brains work together to achieve a common goal

The interdisciplinary team is all smiles as they sign in.

Academic teams become champions

The FP academic teams had a good showing during their competitions during the year. Early in the second semester, members of the teams began studying. The theme for this year's competitions was on Russian culture. Students learned about Russian royalty, music, mathematicians, and more. At the regional competition on April 19, the interdisciplinary team achieved an astounding first place finish.

Freshmen Kathryn Begle and Tyler Brames consult over some Russian history.

Junior Amber Messmer uses the "Fattress 3000" to lose extra pounds.

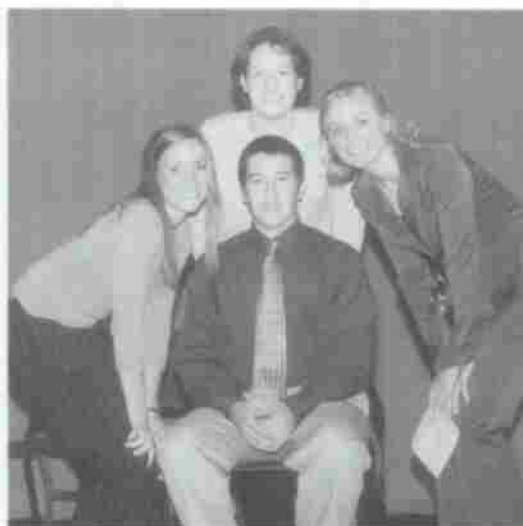

Dan Schnieders, junior, meanders around before he has to get ready.

RaDio DI is a hit

The high school Destination Imagination team had another successful season. They started practices in January, and on March 12 they competed at regional. They were given third place at regional, which made them eligible to compete at the state level on April 16. The team placed seventh at state with their skit "Live! It's RaDio DI!"

NaHoSo works together

This year's National Honor Society was extremely successful. They had a total membership of 47 students. The club, which was under the leadership of Mrs. Christy Bartley, took part in hosting the parent-teacher conferences, Monday morning campus clean-up, tutoring, and they began working at the school bookstore. NaHoSo is a club that takes extra effort to become a member. To be in NaHoSo, students must have a 3.0 GPA, and show leadership, service, and good character. When new members are inducted, they sign a membership roster that contains the names of past and present members.

The NaHoSo officers were Becky Hochgesang, Kristy Hopf, Brittney Knies, and Aaron Ketzner.

Senior Aaron Trafton signs in as a new NaHoSo member.

The new NaHoSo members posed for a picture after the induction ceremony.

Erin Troesch can't decide which dessert looks the most delicious.

Mr. Larry Tenbarger takes a break during the fall spaghetti supper.

Beta officers Kristy Hopf, Liz Steinmetz, Kyle Schroering, and Tyler Foerster hold up the "keys" to being a Beta member.

Beta members come out strong

This year's Beta Club was very active. They were under the leadership of Mr. Larry Tenbarger and Ms. Leslie Shobe. The group attended the state convention in November, and came away with many awards. Several FP students became eligible to compete at the national convention. To pay for the large hotel bill, the club added a spaghetti supper in December, which was very successful. The club, which was 86 members strong, also took part in tutoring and their annual spring spaghetti supper.

Looking Back

Looking back through our memories of what we once were Now feeling accomplished and proud of what we made ourselves to be

Our dreams were once a shadow that we could never catch
But now they seem like reality and a hope to be something new

We all have been through tough times, but with each other's help we have got through our troubles, and we never drifted apart

Hopefully, we will not depart from each other's hearts as we make our way into the future and the path to fulfilling ourselves

When we have our diplomas in our hands please remember all the memories you had

The laughs and the cries, and the love of 2005 that will never die
As we give each other hugs and wish each other good luck in the future always remember

This whole experience of high school is what you have made of it, and what you have accomplished is because you worked for it

And never forget the people you met because in the end it's all about the people and the relationships you have endured along this sometimes jagged way of life

Friends and Family will miss Ian King

Ian and his father read a book together.

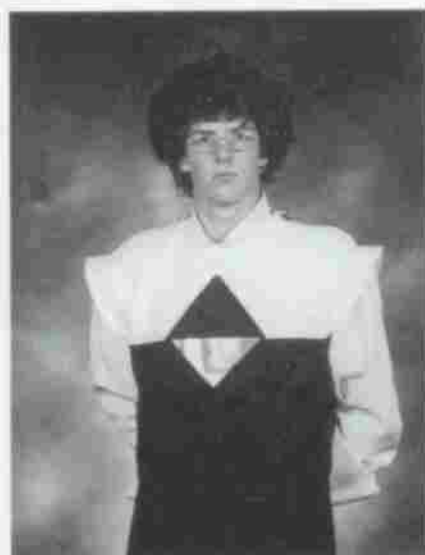

We will all miss Ian King, but those of us who truly knew him will never forget him. From playing his amp a little too loudly in the band room to making his friends and fellow band members laugh with his great sense of humor, Ian will live on.

Ian enjoyed being in marching band.

Ian liked playing in the SP and F football league.

Ian receives his first guitar.

2004-05 is an amazing ride for FP Nation

What an amazing roller coaster ride for the Forest Park Ranger Nation. Who would have thought that our little school would lead the state in basketball as the State Champs and have the highest ISTEP scores in all of Southern Indiana. Forest Park also set high standards during the year for band, FFA, Academic Bowl, and many of the numerous clubs and sports activities our school offers.

The community, parents, student participants, coaches, sponsors, school staff members, administrators, and school board all worked together to have one of the most influential school years in the history of our school.

The rich and rewarding tradition of our school will live on and touch many lives in the future. It is the continuous quest for excellence and perfection that inspires the students and staff to do their best in every area.

As you visit our school through this yearbook, I hope you will develop the sense of pride that all of us here at Forest Park have in common. I think you will agree that we have had a remarkable year of success. I greatly appreciate our staff, students, and most importantly the many hours of work and dedication our yearbook staff has given to this yearbook. They have provided each of us an excellent review of the year in pictures and factual reporting. Sit back, get comfortable, and enjoy a wonderful review of the school year of 2004-2005.

Special delivery

Life skills students get special attention

James Slusser, Michael Bush and Josh Mundy graduated from the Forest Park special needs program this year. Other students were Kelly VanWinkle, Becky Davis and Chris Kraay.

The teachers in the Special Needs Department were Mrs. Paula Peter, Mr. Gary Wittman, and Mrs. Judy Lamkin. The teachers' aides were Mrs. Mary Kay Berger, Mrs. Janet Reckelhoff, Mrs. Judy Mehling, Mrs. Kristin Gayso, Ms. Kristin Jessee, and Mr. Matt Fuhs. They helped their students learn skills that will help them live more productive and independent lives.

Mrs. Gayso helps students in the regular classroom.

CHORUS

Sing your heart out

Sophomores Matt Venekamp and Jordan Sailor enjoy the sound of music.

Senior Hanson Hostetler and junior Jessica Chapman belt it out straight from the heart.

Juniors Autumn Bolte, Kyla Fleck, and Steffi Mehringer sing their parts.

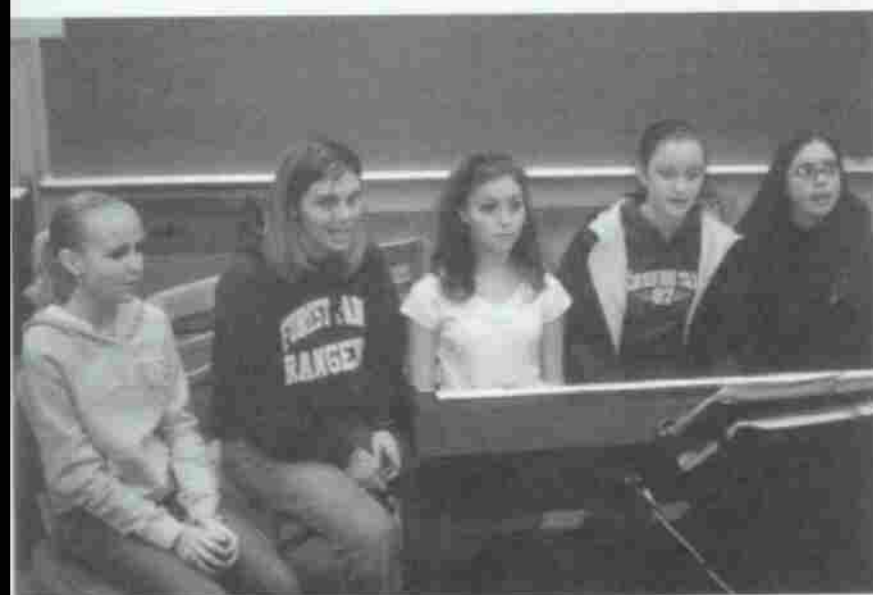

These freshmen can't wait to see what they are going to sing next.

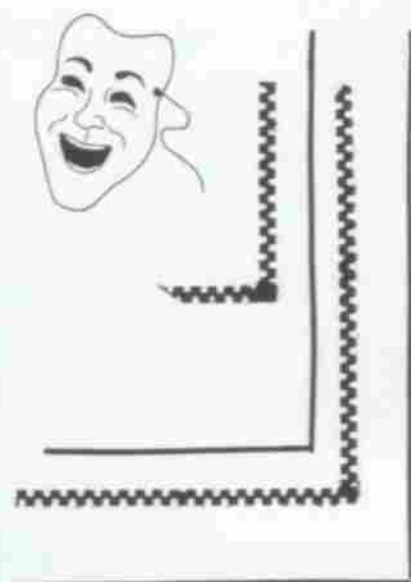

The Forest Park choir has changed drastically from the past. This year included more boys, and many new girls. The chorus has performed in many contests. They have also kept busy with learning new songs for the spring contests. While many individuals and groups practiced for solo and ensemble, the ending was very rewarding. Also, this year is the first year the girls' choir entered into the new jazz category and ended up doing very well.

Juniors Autumn Bolte and Kyla Fleck discuss their parts to sing.

The freshman chorus members know practice makes perfect!

Midnight Enchantment

Lasts until the clock strikes twelve

With the theme of Midnight Enchantment, the 2005 Prom was a beautiful sight. With the grand piano and the glamorous black and white floors, the Community Center definitely looked like a ballroom. The juniors even constructed white pillars to set off the ballroom. There was also a chocolate fountain, and everyone enjoyed dipping their sweets and fruit in it. Many people went from the prom to the post prom, which had the theme of "Under the Sea."

Good luck class of 2005

Graduation was held on May 22, 2005 in the Earl F. Buechler Arena. The class of 2005 gathered for the last time to remember all the good times that they had with their friends in high school. The chorus and band performed songs, and memorable speeches were given.

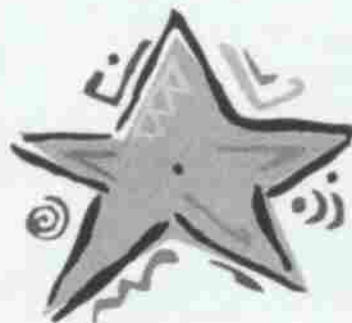

The speakers included Jessica Neukam, Sarah Vaal, Whitney Nord, Mandy Knust, and Brittney Knies.

The class of 2005 throw their caps in enjoyment.

Chase Kippenbrock, Ben Schwoeppe, and Brandon Berg can't wait to graduate.

Ashley Mullis and Josh Mundy march into the gym.

Travis Theising relishes the idea that he has finally graduated.

Expanding the mind

Senior Jessica Wright takes charge in the absence of a teacher.

Mr. Emmert imitates the Greek god, Atlas, in the new humanities class

This German class gathers around to listen to the wise words of Mr. Tenbarger.

English and foreign languages cast barriers aside

The foreign language and English classes experienced changes coming in on all sides this year. With Mrs. Jennifer Akers' switch into teaching freshman English, Mr. Rock Emmert was permitted to teach juniors about "the Humanities." Mr. Ed Walston and Ms. Leslie Shobe taught sophomore and senior English. The foreign language classes had some very unique changes this year. Junior Jim Gregory became a foreign exchange student in Germany. He made sure to keep Mr. Larry Tenbarger's German classes well informed. Mrs. Vicki Beach and Mrs. Emily Hauser taught Spanish. During the second semester, Mrs. Hauser went on maternity leave, leaving Mrs. Beach and Miss Brandy Daniel to cover her classes.

Crossing the barriers

These freshman Spanish students take full advantage of a food day.

Mrs. Beach is extremely proud of her unusual talent.

Ambassador Jim welcomes the world to the wonders of Europe.

The stress of teaching has finally caused Mr. Tenborge to crack.

Mrs. Hauser loves to imitate her daughter, Abby.

The woodwinds finish the show at District with outstanding energy.

The flutes do their usual warm-up.

Whitney Nord can't wait to swing that flag.

Jenny Zoglman is pumped and ready with her trumpet posse.

Mr. Bradley gets the drummers tuned up.

New instructor + New methods = New band

Under the direction of Mr. Chad Gayso, the Forest Park Marching Rangers traveled up to Indianapolis for state competition, and gained tenth place. With many hours of hard work on the school's blacktop, and many new changes to endure, the band succeeded in their hearts once again this year. This year's band included 34 woodwinds, 26 brass, 13 percussion, and 20 color guard. This rounds it up to 95 members, which declined from last year's total of 108 members strong. The field commanders Sherly Kieper and Steffi Mehringer led the band to many accomplishments, and with Mr. Gayso behind this band there should be many more winnings to present!

Creativity blossoms in the art and drama world

Appassionata Von Climax tells Li'l Abner where she got her furs.

Audience travels to Dogpatch, USA

The audience for the FP musical was taken to a charming little town known as Dogpatch, USA. Under the direction of Mr. Chuck Bradley, actors, musicians, and technicians worked together to perform the comical musical "Li'l Abner." Senior Matt Gilmore played the leading role as Abner Yokum while junior Megan Sicard was Daisy Mae. The cast told the story of how a small town was about to be bombed with nuclear weapons because it was deemed "the most unnecessary place of all." In an effort to save his beloved Dogpatch, Abner gave his special Yokumberry tonic to the government. The story goes through many twists and turns and finally ends up with a shocking find.

The scientists sing about their amazing discovery.

Sam, Earthquake, Mammy, and Daisy Mae discuss the Dogpatch way of life.

Earthquake tells about his "secret desire."

Daisy Mae tells Li'l Abner and his cronies about the Cornpone Meetin' that's about to occur.

Two wives, Hannah Goldman and Laura Hoten, are angry about their new husbands.

Terri Ketzner, sophomore, paints on a biology table.

Art classes take to the halls

Art classes at FP branched out this year. Young artists could be seen doing anything from making chairs out of cardboard to painting Mrs. Gramelspacher's biology tables. Mrs. Tammy Taylor taught Art I, painting, drawing, visual communication, and ceramics. For their visual communication class, students could be seen making cd covers. In April, art students displayed their work from the year during the annual art show.

Kelsey Uebelhor, freshman, is enhancing her artistic abilities.

Brandon Petry, senior, measures out a perfect length.

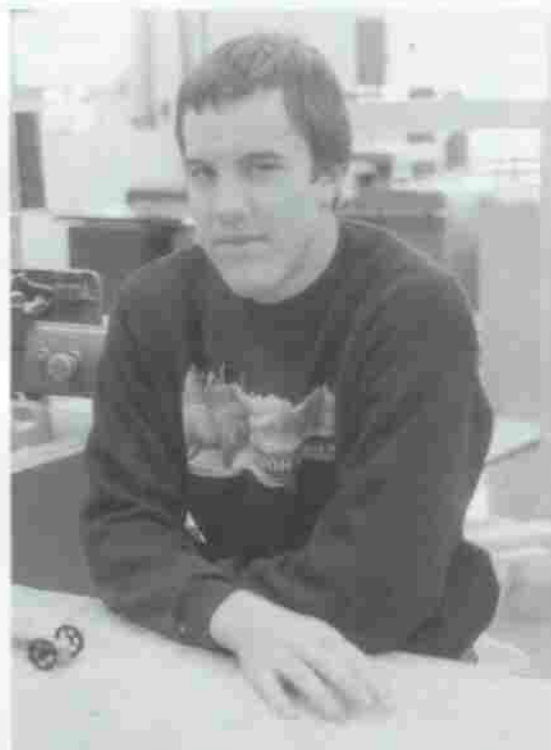

The muscle men pump their muscles backstage.

Continuing the tradition

Mr. Johnson prepares the cars for takeoff.

The class launches their CO2 cars.

Junior Adam Huff is deep in thought about the industrial arts.

This year Mr. Doug Walker continued to teach students about how important agriculture is to the world. He taught agriculture mechanics, resource management, introduction to agriculture, agriculture business management, animal science, landscape management, and SAE. The classes kept the flower gardens beautiful and worked on maintaining farm equipment. The industrial technology classes were taught by Mr. Jim Johanneman, Mr. Jeff Johnson, and Mr. Steve Stoffel. The pre-engineering class was continued along with metal, woods, graphic arts, drafting, and power.

Baylen Leonard, junior, checks to see if he put the screw in tightly.

Students learn about healthy lifestyles for the future

Sophomore Trae Childress listens to a presentation by PEP.

Sophomores Jordan Saylor, Jace Rasche, and Brian Rahman listen to the day's lecture.

Mrs. Emily Hauser and Mr. Matt Sisley continued teaching students about living healthily. Mrs. Hauser taught the PE classes this year with the help of Mrs. Kathy Hopf, and Mr. Sisley taught health. The teachers tried to educate students about healthy lifestyles and how to maintain them throughout life. Mrs. Hauser had some fun planned for her PE classes as a reward for the end of first semester. The students were going to go bowling right before Christmas, but they were snowed in.

Students gain understanding of things unseen

There were many choices available for FP students who wanted to take a math or science class this year. Class explored anything from Pythagorean's Theorem to why people inherit certain genes from their parents. The teachers in the Math and Science Departments were Mrs. Sharon Gramelspacher, Mr. Karl Hinson, Mrs. Amy Hawkins, Mr. Tom Meyer, Mr. Don Prusz, Mr. Kevin Wertman, and Mrs. Karrie Wolf. The math classes during the year were made up of pre-algebra, Algebra I, geometry, business math, advanced business math, Algebra II, pre-calculus, and calculus. The science classes were Biology I, chemistry, Biology II, and physics.

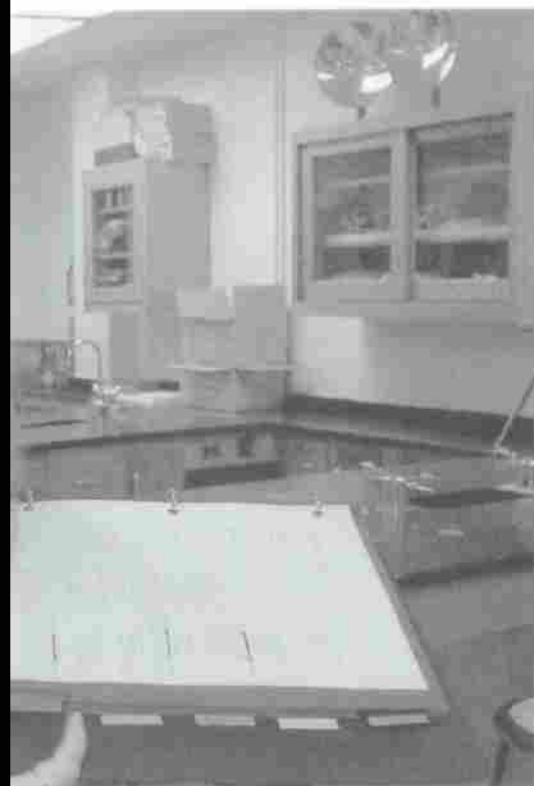

Junior Emily Hildenbrand is ready to give up trying to understand Biology II.

Senior Matt Gilmore focuses on the Algebra II lesson.

Branden Berg, senior, laughs as he joins in the electric charge in physics. Shocking!

Jared Wilson, junior, enjoys playing with electricity

Students beware of Mrs. Wolf when she gives you "the look."

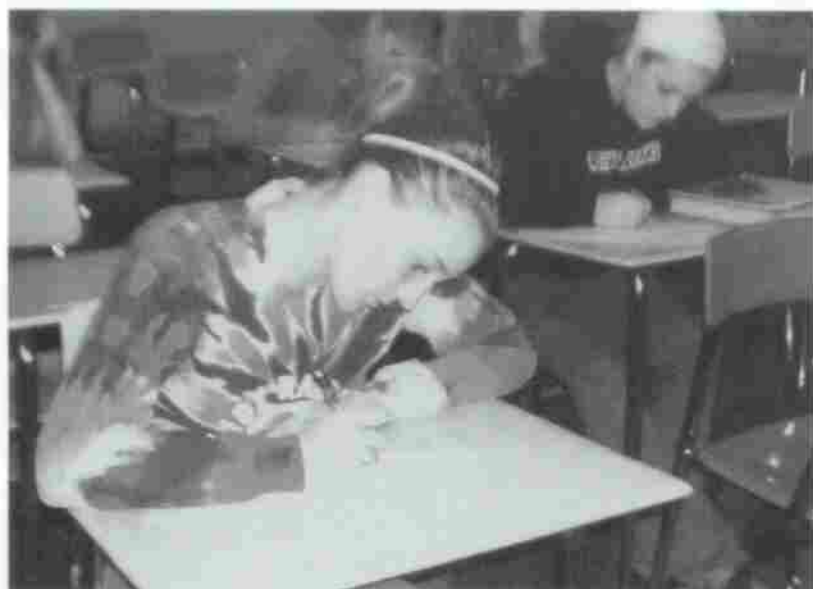

Senior Jessica Neukam works hard on a Biology II test.

Classes provide entertainment and education for students.

Ms. Niehaus counts the class during her daily attendance.

Social studies open a window to the past

From the Middle Ages to the Civil War, and from the Industrial Revolution to the Roaring Twenties, FP social studies teachers have it covered. The Social Studies Department was made up of Mr. Tony Hasenour, Ms. Ellen Hendricks, and Ms. Marty Niehaus. The classes they taught were world history, government, economics, world geography, and US history. Students were able to learn about history in exciting ways. They were exposed to anything from Mr. Hasenour's dancing figures in the notes to listening to Ms. Niehaus talk about all the "Herbs" in history.

Junior Ashton Frick washes her hands as she prepares to cook.

Mrs. Allen passes cookies around for the group to taste.

Bethany Henke, junior, adds some finishing touches to her delicacy.

Seniors Chase Kippenbrock, Adam Wagner, and Damion Buschkoetter finish their culinary masterpieces.

Once again, students were seen carrying their homework babies through the school. Yes, everyone knew what the child development class was doing. Mrs. Brenda Allen taught this and many other classes this year. Along with child development, she taught nutrition and wellness, advanced nutrition, and human development. Students were expected to do a variety of things in her classes, whether it was to change a diaper or bake cookies. Mrs. Allen's classes prepared students for possible careers and lifestyles in the future.

Business students prepare for the corporate world

Mr. Jarred Howard and Mrs. Beth Schnellenberger continued preparing students for the future in the business classes. Students were given many options while choosing a class in the business field. The classes offered included introduction to business, computer applications, accounting, business law, and advanced computer applications. The business law class held its annual trial in May. The judge, senior Natalie Hasenour, kept the courtroom under control. This year, the jury found the defendant, junior Erin Troesch, not guilty of second-degree murder, but they fined her $100 for criminal hazing.

Junior Eric Evitts answers questions on the witness stand.

The girls beat out their biggest competitor Southridge along with two other great teams. Sectional this year was held at FP, and the girls brought home the victory. Many more years of winning sectional is in the future for these talented ladies.

Golf team goes to the 'fore!'

The year 2005 will definitely be a historical mark for the Forest Park golf team. On April 14, freshman Evan Daunhauer made a hole-in-one at the Huntingburg Country Club on a 165-yard shot. The golf team was coached by Mr. Bill Dittmer this year. The golf team came in second in the Blue Chip and ninth in the sectional. The seniors on the team this year were Colin Austin, Chad Seaton, and Ross Weyer. The MVP for the team this year was Colin, and freshman Kaleb Opel won the Mental Attitude Award. Coach Dittmer said the team worked hard this year, and he hated to see the seniors leave.

Girls' soccer kicks it in gear

Excitement was in the air this season for the girls' soccer team. If you went to any of the girls' games you would realize how much effort was put into winning all the games that they did. Both junior varsity and varsity had a better record then last year and were coached by Mr. Brad Fischer.

Even after losing to Jasper in sectional, that did not down the team's spirits at all. This spontaneous team consisted of 22 girls and three coaches. The six seniors that led the team were Becky Hochgesang, Brittney Knies, Amanda Gogel, Whitney Nord, Kristina Wendholt, and Stephanie Van Winkle.

The girls' soccer team was one of the fall sports with the most spirit. Many times over the course of the season they would wear colorful or homemade shirts to show their pride for the team.

"I am very proud of all my girls," said Coach Fischer. "They were excellent throughout the whole season."

The girls could also count on the Forest Park fans to always be there for them as well. Whenever the girls would huddle up or have a team meeting the fans would be clapping and cheering then on, even when they were unfortunate to lose some games.

All the girls and coach Fischer said they had a blast this season, and are anticipating to go start again next year.

Fp volleyball has a smashing season

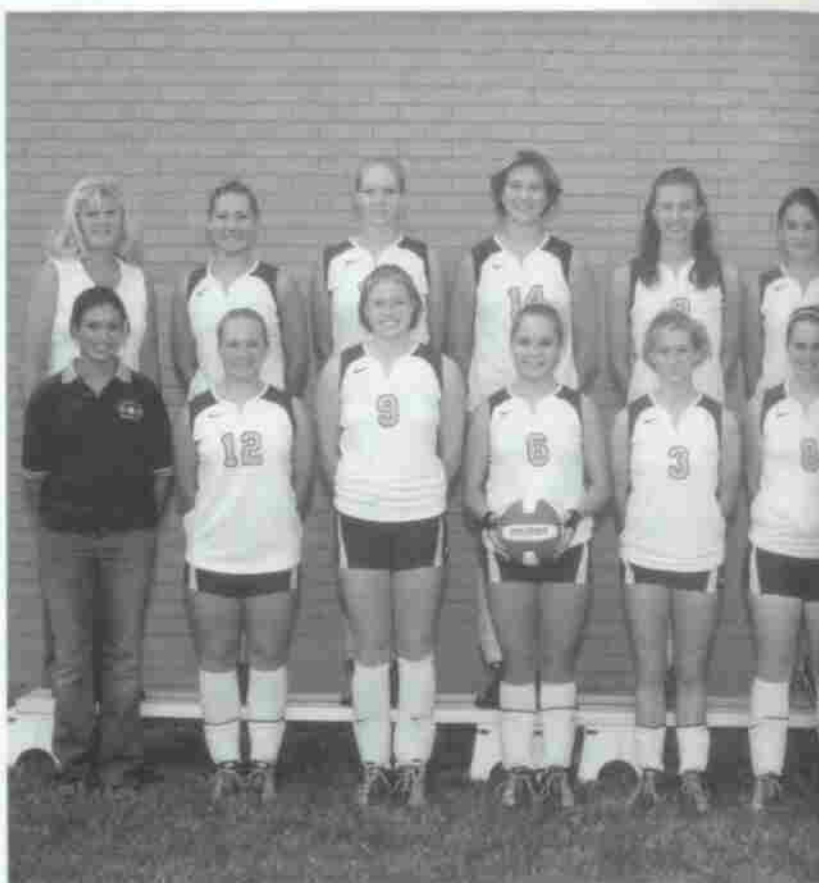

This was the first year in six years that the volleyball team did not win sectionals. However they had a good season and they had fun doing it.

The record for the season was 19-6, a very competitive score.

This year's seniors were Kacie Giesler, Amber Gogel, Audrey Kress, Katie Schipp, and Sarah Vaal. The managers were Courtney Fleck, Kristy Hopf, and Alison Wylam.

Junior Emily Hildenbrand recalls a time when coach Jamie Giesler danced for the team to get them pumped them up and get them ready for the game.

Cross country teams run this town

After conquering all the laps, hills, miles, and even Lake Celina, the cross country teams turned to conquer their opponents. Both teams advanced to regional in 2004 and the girls won Blue Chip for the second year in a row. Even injuries could not hold the determined girls' team down. Senior Mandy Knust had a foot injury that made her unable to run for the first part of the season, and sophomore Chelsea Merkley had hip trouble and was unable to run the last half of the season. Despite this, the lady Rangers placed fifth at the Jasper Sectional while the boys placed third. The boys' cross country team was led by their lone senior Aaron Ketzner. He led the young team, comprised mostly of lower classmen, to a successful season with many accomplishments. The boys worked hard to achieve their goals.

Hard work and great friends

Dancers know how to succeed

The 2004-05 dance team was the strongest team FP has ever produced. Nineteen girls united together and had an extremely successful season. Though the year brought emotional struggles, the girls managed a second place finish at state competition in not one but two dances. The dances were kick and funk, and they also placed third in pom. Senior Whitney Nord said, "We are so much better this year. We are starting to get respect from the community, and we've grown to be a nineteen member family with a great mom." They also came away from dance camp with many individual and team awards. Senior Sarah Vaal has fond memories of camp. She said the best times were the nights they spent at either dance camp or Mrs. Heilers' house where they were all together talking like best friends.

Thirteen may be an unlucky number for some, but not for the 2005 girls' track team. They brought home their thirteenth straight track sectional with the help of their retiring coach Mrs. Vicki Beach and assistant coaches Mrs. Emily Hauser and Mrs. Rachel Hinson. The girls also won Blue Chip and were undefeated in dual meets. They had twelve girls move on to regional. The cheerleaders attended a National Cheerleader Association camp where the varsity achieved top team and many individuals were recognized as All-Americans. Lone senior Whitney Nord was honored by being invited to be a part of the NCA Staff. The varsity and JV teams competed at regional this year for the first time. The JV advanced to state where they placed eleventh. During the season the girls made strides in strengthening their tumbling, builds, jumps, and flexibility. They also took gymnastics lessons. Practices were often held in the commons area since there were no gyms available, but the cheerleaders did the best with what they had. Come on let's go, stick it, and be sharp, WE GOT THIS! Could often be heard during practices and at games. A hello cheer, school song, a tumbling line, floor cheers, and line up were some responsibilities that the cheerleaders carried out. The largest obstacle and goal was trying to get the crowds fired up.

Ranger wrestlers have successful season; Mitch advances to the dome

The Ranger wrestlers had numerous new freshmen on this year's squad, which filled up many empty spots. The freshmen helped their upperclassmen achieve a successful season. Sophomore Mitch Atkins advanced to state after winning sectional, regional, and placing fourth at semi-state in the 119 weight class. At the Dome he won his first round match, which was good enough for eighth place and made him a state medalist. Ben Taber, Matt Venekamp, and Zach Hessig advanced to regional, and junior Eric Evitts, who competed in the 112 weight class, won regional and stayed in the tourney through semi-state. Wrestling has helped the young. "Whether I win or lose, I leave whatever happened out on the mat," said senior Ben Taber. "I take only the experience from my previous match." Mr. Ryan Haas was the coach.

Field commanders Steffi Mehringer and Sherly Kieper prepare to lead the band onto the field.

Former exchange student Mayumi Komuro came to the Prom to visit with her Forest Park friends.

Look through our

As a school year comes to a close, we look back on how all the different students can come together. Needless to say, Forest Park is full of many different people with different styles and backgrounds. But this school knows how to include everyone in all the things we have been proud of over this past year. We can look back at the countless memories that have been made. Girls' magnifying glass

basketball winning sectional, boys' basketball winning state, and the rise of the roller coaster are just a few fond memories. Another class has graduated and gone, and the next class will have to step up and be the leaders for the next year, but the graduates of Forest Park will always be remembered. We hope you take a closer look through our magnifying glass.

Come together

Look through our magnifying glass

Throughout the many long nights, the arguments, the blood and sweat of each journalism student, the staff feels we have put forth our best effort to make this one of the best yearbooks ever! Due to the new computers, the staff was able to contribute many new ideas and spice it up a little.

Everyone who put an effort into making this yearbook possible deserves a pat on the back because it was hard work. Thanks to all of the advertisers for helping out because, without them, the yearbook would be a lot thinner or more expensive. Also a big thanks goes to Mr. Walston. With his cracking jokes and having us over to his house to watch movies, he knows how to have a good time while being professional, and that, my friends, describes a great teacher! Most of all, everyone at FP deserves a huge thanks for contributing new ideas so that this yearbook stands out from others.

This year has been a blast, but it's time to set sail on a new adventure. I hope everyone likes what the staff has put into this book. My editor's job is over, but I hope next year everyone will want to contribute to the history of our school. Let your ideas be seen on paper. Thanks again and good luck to everyone.
